F. POLICIES FOR CONSUMER TRANSFERS BETWEEN FISCAL INTERMEDIARIES

Consumer transfers between Fiscal Intermediaries that occur so that the transferring FI issues payroll checks in one calendar year and the receiving FI issues checks in the next calendar year require no special handling. In these cases, each FI would be responsible for all federal and state tax liability deposits and filings for their respective calendar year.

Consumer transfers between Fiscal Intermediaries that occur so that the transferring FI and the receiving FI both issue payroll checks in the same calendar year require special handling. Federal Income Tax (FIT) Withholding and Employer and Employee Social Security and Medicare Taxes require different procedures than State Income Tax (SIT) Withholdings, FUTA, SUI and Massachusetts State Health Insurance. Workers Compensation Insurance should be handled separately from all others. The transferring FI must send year-to-date and quarter-to-date information for all Home care workers to the receiving FI.

1. FIT, Social Security & Medicare Taxes

Since the total of all consumer wage data must tie to the aggregate filings under the FI's EIN number, it is necessary to transfer all of the year-to-date information from one FI to another regardless of when the transfer happens during the calendar year.

The transferring FI will back out all of the year-to-date information in their current quarter Form 941 thereby reducing their tax liabilities in the current quarter. This process will allow reimbursement to the transferring FI for all FIT, Social Security and Medicare taxes deposited for the consumer in the calendar year. A check for that reimbursement amount must be sent to the receiving FI.

The receiving FI must then add that same year-to-date information into their current quarter Form 941 and deposit the transferred funds with the IRS. This procedure transfers the year-to-date information from the transferring FI to the receiving FI and ensures that the aggregate filings balance to the Forms W-2 issued at the end of the calendar year. It also ensures that the year-to-date gross payroll per worker is maintained at only the receiving FI so that the process of determining any refund of Social Security and Medicare taxes based on that year's threshold can be accomplished efficiently and in a timely manner.

2. SIT, FUTA, SUI and Mass Health Insurance

These consumer filings are performed under the consumer's Employer Identification Number (EIN) and therefore require different procedures. Any monthly or quarterly filings or tax liability payments performed by the transferring FI will remain intact. The transferring FI will send a check to the receiving FI for any tax liabilities due for the current quarter-to-date that have not been deposited with the appropriate governmental agency. Any monthly or quarterly reports filed with governmental agencies must be sent to the receiving FI.

3. Workers Compensation Insurance

The transferring FI should retain all gross payroll processed at their agency for purposes of Workers Compensation Insurance. The amounts used to determine audit adjustments should include all gross payroll processed by the FI.
